IN THIS ISSUE

Sources and Evidence

- Selma Merbaum-Eisinger. The life of a girl from Tchernowitz and her poems. She was a member of Hashomer Hatzair, who perished in a Transdniestrian Concentration Camp at the age of 18. Her early poems were preserved as by a miracle.
- Simha Statfeld. A Jewish partisan tells about the life and struggle of Jewish groups who kept alive, hiding in the forests near Hanachov.

Articles

- Prof. Vladimir Jankelevitch, head of the cathedra for Philosophy and Morality at the Paris Sorbonne, expounds his accusation ("j'accuse") against attempts to extenuate the crimes of the German people and to forget them.
- Prof. Emil Fackenheim of Toronto, Canada, deals with the impact of the Holocaust upon the ways of thinking and the consciences of Non-Jews.

Research

- Dr. Gideon Shimoni of the Institute for Contemporary Jewry, Jerusalem, has made a study of letters and documents that throw light upon the attitudes of Mahatma Gandhi to Jews, Judaism and Zionism, to the Holocaust and to the Conflict between Jews and Arabs.
- Ruth Zariz of Kibbutz Mash'abei Sadeh, shows one aspect of operations aimed at the rescue of Jews during World War II through promises of immigration certificates to Eretz Israel.
- Rachel Menver studied underground publications of Hashomer Hatzair in the Warsaw Ghetto (1940—1942) out of which she reconstructs a picture of the life, activities and spiritual values of the members of this movement through those years. —
- Menachem Kaufmann of the Institute for Contemporary Jewry, Jerusalem, brings another chapter from his comprehensive study of activities of Non-Zionist Jews in the U.S. during the period when decisions were in the balance in the U.S. and in the U.N.

Documentation

- Zvi Erez of Kibbutz Dvir, brings quotations from speeches by Himmler, that bear out what had been published before about the Warsaw Ghetto rising.
- Dr. Joseph Walk of Bar-Ilan University and "Yad Vashem", brings details from Gestapo reports and from reports by the attorney general of Baden. He shows that while there were individuals in Germany, who struggled against the Nazi regime, there was no real underground.

Books

 Dr. Jesaia Jellinek of Haifa University, brings the last of his comprehensive bibliography on the destruction of Slovak Jewry.
