IN THIS ISSUE

Articles

- Israel Guttman in his essay probes the notions of Martyrdom (Kiddush HaShem) and Sacredness of Life (Kedushat HaHaim) from various aspects, especially from the historical one.
- Yehuda Bauer discusses a number of questions connected with Moshe Ouna's arguments (in Yalkut Moreshet, No. 22) and his remarks to Alexander Donat's essay "A Voice from the Ashes".

Research

- Raoul Hilberg presents his investigations of the role played by the Reichsbahn in the annihilation of Jews during World War 2. In his work he uses authentic source material.
- Gideon Shimoni brings the last part of his research work on M. Ghandi's relation to Jews, Judaism and Zionism. Here he speaks mainly of the attempts made to carry on a dialogue with him on these subjects.
- Renato Spiegel publishes here his work on antisemitism in France between the two World Wars.
- Tsvi Bachrach reviews the "Volkische Bewegung" in Germany before Hitler and its impact upon the Nazis.
- Moshe Tsizik writes about the discussions and the ideological questions which agitated the members of HaShomer HaTsair gathered at the Vilno center.
- Eva Eshkoli-Vagman gives here part of her research on the attitudes and activities of the Jewish Leadership in Eretz-Israel in rescue operations of European Jewry during the Holocaust.

Testimonials

- We bring excerpts from writings by the late L. Levité (of Ein-Harod), one of the outstanding Leaders of the Kibbutz movement, who took part in the Zionist Congress held on the eve of World War 2 (August 1939) and continued his mission to Poland during the early days of Nazi occupation.
- Ida Kaminska-Meron of kibbutz Bet-Zera testifies on what happened to her during the war years in the USSR, in camps there and above all in Kolkhoz in Central Asia.
